Executive summary

Week 2 officially sorted the contenders from the clowns. While the top three franchises consolidated power at an unblemished 2-0, the bottom tier plunged straight into panic—highlighted by 3:30 AM waiver desperation, identity-crisis shell teams, and wide receivers posting negative point totals. With four teams now languishing at 0-2, the early-season relegation panic has officially begun.

Week 2 Superlatives

Manager of the Week: Sam

Took down his matchup by deploying Jaxon Smith-Njigba for an explosive 38.00-point clinic (3 TDs, 155 yds), advancing cleanly to 2-0-0 with another wire-to-wire win. Honorable mention to Isaac for riding Josh Allen's 40.82-point nuclear explosion to 138.52 points.

Tough Luck Purple Heart: Danny

Put up a very respectable 115.26 points—which would have won three other matchups this week—only to run straight into Josh Allen and CeeDee Lamb combining for over 72 points. Dongers officially 1-1.

The Self-Sabotage Trophy: Will

Wrote an entire league essay about waivers, only to drop starting tight end Jake Ferguson and deploy a guy who gave him 2.7 points while his team lost by 27.

The Buy High, Sell Low Medal: Ben

Dropped a player for $0, spent $8 to rent him back 48 hours later, and rode his 2nd-round pick Drake Maye (9.02 pts) straight into a dead-last 0-2 record.

Matchup Breakdowns

Garrett's Gridiron Goons (133.74) def. Goyim Garett (106.60)

The Storyline: The Commissioner gets schooled in daylight.

Will spent all week lecturing the league on waiver compliance and setting 3:30 AM alarms to scavenge discarded tight ends. Come Sunday, Garrett gave him an absolute clinic, cruising to an easy 27-point blowout to start the year 2-0.

The Damage:

Garrett fired on all cylinders. Ja'Marr Chase bounced back with 23.0 pts, King Henry kept rolling (16.2 pts), and the Patriots defense gift-wrapped him 21.0 pts on a pick-six. Over on Will's side, a monster 35.5-pt game from Davante Adams went completely to waste thanks to a Javonte Williams no-show (6.5 pts) and a miserable 2.7 pts from Will's prized 3:30 AM waiver addition, Brenton Strange. Will's Yahoo rating drops by 30 as he limps home with a D+.

Draxx Them Sklounst (109.46) def. Hingle McCringleberry (100.96)

The Storyline: JSN puts on a clinic as Liam's kicker panic falls flat.

Billed as Liam's big bounce-back week, the Draxx corporate machine instead rolled to 2-0. Liam finally remembered to start an active kicker, but it wasn't enough to survive an offensive masterclass from Sam's receiving corps.

The Damage:

Jaxon Smith-Njigba was the undisputed player of the week, torching Liam for 155 yards, 3 touchdowns, and 38.0 massive points. Liam's newly acquired leg Chase McLaughlin actually delivered 16.0 points, but you can't kick your way out of a hole when starting wideout DJ Moore finishes with -0.10 pts and Bijan Robinson gets held to single digits. Liam falls to 0-2 into the league basement.

Matt's Malicious Gooners (105.98) def. Do not disturb on. (94.62)

The Storyline: The Door Mat strikes back as Ben goes radio silent.

After spending the week roasting Matthew in his team name and burning $8 of FAAB to rent his own player back, Ben panicked, renamed his squad "Do not disturb on.," and took a direct hit to the chin. Matthew got his revenge, climbing out of the cellar while Ben tumbled to a dead-last 0-2.

The Damage:

Matthew survived a 0.00-point injury donut from Nico Collins behind a balanced attack led by Jahmyr Gibbs (20.30 pts) and Jaylen Waddle (17.80 pts). Over on Ben's sideline, Jonathan Taylor went nuclear for 27.20 points, but it wasn't enough to overcome his prized second-round quarterback Drake Maye sleepwalking to 9.02 pts and tight end Colston Loveland logging 0.80 pts. Ben's rating drops again as he earns a league-worst D+.

Saac Man (138.52) def. Danny's Dongers (115.26)

The Storyline: Josh Allen goes nuclear as the Dongers come up short.

In a battle of Week 1 titans, Isaac stayed undefeated behind a monster aerial assault. Danny put up a respectable fight, but his elite receivers went ice cold when it mattered most.

The Damage:

Josh Allen was an unstoppable force, putting up an absurd 40.82 points (5 total TDs) while CeeDee Lamb added 31.30 points of his own. That proved more than enough to offset Saquon Barkley taking a nap for 2.50 pts. Danny got a 7.00-point disappearing act from Justin Jefferson that doomed the Dongers to a D+ grade and their first loss of the year.

OPPAI!! (114.72) def. Hiroshima Handjobs (87.08)

The Storyline: Joe secures his first win as Bowen takes another beating.

After dropping 152 points in a heartbreaking Week 1 loss, Joe channeled his rage into Thursday night and never looked back. Bowen failed to crack 90 points for the second straight week, sliding into a miserable 0-2 hole.

The Damage:

Amon-Ra St. Brown carried Joe's squad with 30.70 pts (142 yds, 2 TDs), backed up by 20.80 pts from Kenneth Walker III to easily absorb Malik Nabers' 0.60-point stinker. Over on Bowen's sideline, Christian McCaffrey showed up with 20.60 pts, but the rest of the lineup completely flatlined. Justin Herbert sleepwalked to 9.88 pts and Kyle Pitts continued his cardio tour with 2.00 pts, cementing Bowen's second straight D grade.

Commissioner's Corner

On the $100 FAB Waivers:

Every team in our league gets a fake $100 budget for the season, used for bidding on waiver claims throughout the year. When a player gets dropped or is available on waivers, we submit blind bids from our remaining budget, and whoever bids the most wins the claim when waivers process at 3 AM ET every Wednesday night into Thursday. Spend too aggressively early and you'll be stuck bidding pocket change for injury replacements come December.

Once that 3 AM Wednesday processing window passes, any player who wasn't claimed becomes an ordinary free agent — first-come-first-served, no bidding required, until the next waiver cycle resets.

On the Playoffs (10-Team League Edition)

Six of our ten teams make the winners' playoffs. Seeding goes by record first; if teams are tied, total points scored all season is the tiebreaker. The top two seeds earn a first-round bye, sitting out Week 1 of the playoffs while seeds 3 through 6 play each other to join them in the semifinals.

The remaining four teams — the ones who miss the cut — drop into a loser's bracket that runs alongside the real playoffs. Instead of playing for the title, they're playing to avoid the bottom: those games determine who finishes as our league's official last-place finisher, so nobody's season is ever truly meaningless.

League Corruption: Chivalry may be dead, but what about integrity?

It didn't take long for last week's newsletter to make waves across our league. Reactions to the publication indicate growing concern regarding our commissioner's commitment to transparency and the integrity of information.

> "I just want to know what the friggin' commissioner is doing while us hardworking managers fight for information between ourselves!" an irate manager stated on background.

Seeking comment on mounting front-office pressure, our editorial board reached out to league leadership. The commissioner had only one thing to say:

> "Give me a commissioner's column for next week's [publication]. I think it's good [to] remind people how [things] work [around here]."

The editorial board granted Will's demand.

Danny's Dongers: Fan (least) Favorite?

An anonymous reader's submission suggests manager Daniel Graeff simply doesn't have what it takes to lead his squad to the postseason. The scathing one-line review left little to the imagination:

> "Danny's Dongers is below-average."

Maye? or Maye not?

One look at the draft board of rookie manager Ben has fans wondering: is he a genius, or a complete idiot?

Taking Drake Maye in the second round may seem like a boneheaded move to just about everyone, but Ben insists the reach will pay off:

> "Maye is going to pop off, trust me."

We will continue following this developing disaster as the season unfolds.

Week 2 Manager Press Conference

Here's what the managers have to say about week 2:

Bowen: "Utter devastation. Another week with the highest projected point total followed with a complete collapse in all positions. Herbert has been benched after two lack luster performances. Will be heading to the waiver wire and trade block to look to make some moves before week 3 begins and a possibility of 0-3 is upon the Hiroshima Handjobs community."
Garrett: "Came out hard week two and did some willy whacking."
Will: "Goyim Garrett has Netanyahu on the payroll. That's why I had Jayden Daniel's taken out."
Ben: "Normally, the commissioner is the one who handles the money, but we don't even trust ours enough to do that."
Isaac: "Going into this week, I was intimidated. I'd heard intimidating tales about the size and power of Danny's Dong. But it turns out it was all fake news. Honestly, his whole fantasy performance this week was totally flaccid."
Matt: "Easy week. Zero stress. So confident I checked my phone today (Monday) for my app to tell me I won. Danny's Dongers next week. Might as well just give me a bye week and save me time"
Joe: "I titty fucked Bowen this week."
Danny: "Rough weekend for the boys this week. I have no further comments. We come back from these stronger. Matt better watch out next week."
Liam: "Simon Misner is a tranny"

Week 3 Preview

Sam (2-0) vs. Will (1-1): The media mogul meets the midnight commissioner. Will the Draxx corporate machine keep rolling, or will Will's 3:30 AM waiver wire scavenging finally yield a victory?

Ben (0-2) vs. Liam (0-2): The Desperation Derby. Two teams stuck in the basement at 0-2. someone must break the losing streak, unless Drake Maye and Liam's kickers have other plans.

Isaac (2-0) vs. Bowen (0-2): An absolute mismatch on paper. Can Josh Allen carry Saac Man to a spotless 3-0, or will Bowen finally crack 100 points and show signs of life?

Danny (1-1) vs. Garrett (2-0): A massive clash of top contenders. Danny looks to bounce back from his first loss, while Garrett hopes Derrick Henry and Ja'Marr Chase can keep his undefeated season alive.

Joe (1-1) vs. Matt (1-1): Battle of the bitter veterans. Joe is fresh off a blowout win, but Matt is riding high after handling business against "Do not disturb on."

Editor's Notes:

In the publication of our week 1 report, there was an editing mistake that left out the manager's comments from Garrett Record. Our editorial staff apologizes to Garrett, and anybody else affected by our mistake.

The mailroom at our office is no longer accepting letters from out of state. An official return to sender process has been initiated, effective immediately. We apologize for the inconvenience but remain steady in our mission: we will never include any fan submitted images of feet or "even just a few toes" in our publication. Ever.
